PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Happy New Year!

I hope you had a peace-filled time celebrating the festivities of Christmas or Hanukah and the New Year. It seems that the traditional ways of spending these occasions are changing, often due to people being unwell and unable to join with family and friends.

My husband Phil and I had quiet celebrations and others have said it was the same for them.

Since the beginning of the year I've felt that the energy has changed to being much lighter. As a result I feel optimistic and energised for 2023.

I know I have to clean up the clutter around my house to allow the new energies to enter. That will help me to get organised for DSV meetings and to run my Dowsing and Reiki Workshops. I also need to visualise and feel into how my year will manifest for the best to include many catch-ups with friends, increased interest in people attending my workshops or healing sessions. I plan to keep visualising family togetherness and of course, world peace and the earth with clean environments.

We're told from various sources that many old things will fall away this year to make way for new and better things. I feel it's important to be discerning about what we're noticing. Just because something is new, it doesn't necessarily follow that it's the best for all.

I joined in for the Tucson Dowsters monthly Zoom meeting in January. Their speaker was Astrologer Pam Gregory who was especially good. I actually watch each month on YouTube. She is an amazing English woman who collects knowledge and wisdom from many sources. I urge you to watch her on YouTube. Pam reminds us about how powerful we all are, and urges everyone to stay in peace to negate aggression and oppression in the world.

I also enjoy watching regular YouTube recordings by Amanda Ellis, a channeller and tarot reader, from the UK and Lee Harris, an English guy living in USA who channels his guides, the Zees. An Australian tarot reader and channeller who I've recently found online is Maryanne at Revealing Light.

Recently the British Dowsters welcomed a new President, and they have revamped their society and Newsletter. Many of their members contribute stories about their dowsing experiences, which are very interesting.

Our Newsletter Editor, Heather Wilks, would especially welcome your dowsing stories for the DSV Newsletter, so please contact her.

As we begin this new year, I urge you to do your best to stay out of fear, open your heart and spread peace and love to defeat the dark. "Our deepest fear is not that we are inadequate. Our deepest fear is that we are powerful beyond measure" – from "A Third Serving of Chicken Soup for the Soul".

I believe we can all help to manifest a wonderful new world by deliberately imagining world peace and co-operation, friendliness, integrity, and sustainability with an abundance of food, and care for the environment. You might like to think of the divine connection to nature as in ancient Shamanic traditions. Walk with bare feet on the grass to ground yourself, and talk to the trees and plants and animals. With a bit of patience and by remaining quiet you may even receive a whispered message of wisdom.

I hope you'll join us for the first meeting of the year on Sunday 12 February. Perhaps bring a friend. Let's share our knowledge about dowsing, the wonderful tool we have to continually improve our lives.

Lyn Wood, President

OUR NEXT MEETING

For this next meeting on Sunday 12 February, I will present – as your friendly Editor and Vice-President. My subject is "Remote Healing".

Heather Wilks

Reiki healing cushion with Pendulum support

I'll share my dowsing practices to heal remotely, as well as details about the support materials I use to magnify results. I have a keen interest in this work and am generally adding to my various tools as I discover new ideas.

My first Remote / Absent / Distant healing began well before I learned to actually dowse. Then, once I learned to use a pendulum, it all amplified – especially after purchasing Raymon Grace's materials and watching him on YouTube.

Over time I've done remote work for healing people and animals, finding lost objects and pets, transforming relationships and resolving complicated situations with bureaucracy. It's also worked well for buying, selling, renting and leasing properties. Plus, smoothing the way for challenging travel situations.

Some remote work often requires multiple approaches over several days, or even longer. I've learned not to rush it because the little intuitive prompts that pop in once I've started often make all the difference.

I look forward to seeing you at the February meeting and sharing the various ways I use Remote Healing and hope it will inspire you to expand your own approaches.

OUR LAST MEETING

It was so special to catch up with Frances Peterson from Healing Vibrations in person after a stretch of some years. Frances was our wonderful guest speaker at the Dowsing Society of Victoria (DSV) on Sunday 27 November. Usually we meet online for our weekly Facebook dowsing on Fridays at 12 noon AEDT (Thursday evenings in America and Canada) [Ed].

Frances Peterson presenting at the DSV

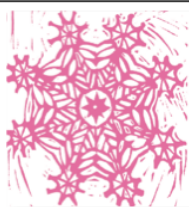

It was clear that Frances enjoyed the opportunity to present at the DSV. She gave a brief overview of how she uses Chinese Face Reading as a foundation in her healing programs to support young teens to thrive.

Interestingly (and definitely by synchronicity) there was one young teen in the audience who bravely volunteered and allowed her to read his face as part of a demonstration.

During her presentation Frances spoke about the various ways she incorporates dowsing in her healing sessions.

To complete her presentation, Frances demonstrated the use of tuning forks in her sound healings as she guided the group in a deeply relaxing and healing meditation, supported by the beautiful and resonant sounds of her fabulous Tibetan bowls.

It was fun having Frances share her passion for her healing work and show how dowsing is such a fundamental part of healing transformations. For more details about Frances : www.healingvibrations.com.au

DOWSING SUCCESS STORY

Thanks to DSV Member, Erika Soul for sharing this dowsing article from a dowser in Singapore, Alan, known as "Tan Boon Teck" on Facebook. He is happy for us to print from his blog post.

Eight years ago I was diagnosed with a Basal Cell cancer on the side of my nose. I made the rounds as everyone does - dermatologist, neurologist, oncologist, dental surgeon, as it encompassed the roof of my mouth. Over the course of 17 months, I was to talk to people all over the world. I went to Duke University and saw Dr Michael Zenn, a Microscopic surgeon. He told me he was going to remove at least half of my nose, use my forehead as a graft site, and make a new nose with my forehead. It would take minimum of five surgeries over the course of eight months. I would then have to go back to surgery to have my new face sanded, until the scars quit forming. He could not tell me how long that would be. "There's nothing else you can do?" I asked. "You want a haircut you come to a barber" was his reply.

Instead of going ahead, I started using Curaderm straight away. It is an illegal cancer cream also known as BEC-5, that is totally organic, made from eggplant.

During this time, my good friend James Sullivan had heard of Raymon Grace and had gone to one of his dowsing classes. He had Raymon treat a bottle of regular water and brought it to me. He also brought along Raymon's DVDs and we watched them together. To say I was amazed at the possibilities with dowsing is really a weak statement. I started putting a small amount of Raymon's water on a cotton ball at night and applying it to the cancer area. I went to sleep with it lying on my face, no tape and just let it fall off whenever I turned throughout the night. But it stayed in the bed with me every night.

Raymon Grace

James and I had done what Raymon said to do, hold the water bottle, bless the water, ask it to take away the cancer and thank it for doing the job. Pure gratitude. Meanwhile, I ordered my own copies of Raymon's DVDs and watched/listened over and over until I felt I'd got it right. I took my pendulum with me everywhere. It stayed in my pocket and at night it lay beside the bed, near my face. Finally, since I am a nurse, my boss and others began to ask me to have radiation because I had been doing my own treatment for 17 months and I still had an open wound on my face with a bandage every day.

I went to a radiologist, because folks, when the cancer leaves, you have no way of knowing it!!! It doesn't say "goodbye", so you have to do whatever you think you have to do. I went to Dr Sailer in Cary, NC and he looked at the original biopsy, and arranged for my shields for radiation to begin. After a few treatments, Dr Sailer came in because the tech went to get him. She had noticed that I was bleeding. The doctor said, "Cancer doesn't bleed". That was when I realized that my cancer had gone and I was done.

Just to add - this is a fairly common cancer. The surgery that Dr Zenn was talking about had been done several times in America. If you google, you can see the surgery they had planned for me.

As a man, scars on your face may be really cool. But women don't think that way. Shortly after all of this happened, one of my doctors called to say his wife had the same problem and asked me what I ended up doing. I told him that I'd never asked him what they were actually going to do. This surgery was going to cost over 200k, in just what could be estimated in the beginning. There's no telling what the actual cost would have been. I asked Dr Zenn if he had ever done such surgery and he had not. No wonder I was scared.

I now have an office of my own. I do what I call alternative healing. I only see very sick patients. I don't have enough business to pay the bills. My goal is to educate and assist anyone who has had a severe diagnosis and does not believe in the treatment by doctors. Our system is so abused by the medical community that no one knows what is the truth. Use your pendulum and you will know the truth. Learn as much as you can from Raymon Grace and ask the pendulum before you make decisions. As you begin to know your pendulum better, I promise you if you dowse with clarity, love and gratitude, your pendulum will never lie to you.

This is a very long and complicated story with this writing only being a mere fraction of the whole. I would like to suggest that everyone increases the vibration of their home to make it happier and healthier. Do this with the chart the way Raymon teaches. And like Raymon says, you take a bath every day. Check on the vibration, (energy) of your home at least twice a week. Bad energy in your home can allow untoward things to happen to the occupants. I want everyone to stay as healthy as they possibly can so that you do not have to be victimized in our medical system.

I tell this story with gratitude for the ones that asked to hear it and I apologize that it has been this long. I am also grateful for this site, a place we can come together and discuss the truth about what we do and who we are. I lovingly ask if there is anything I may do for anyone, you only need to let me know.

DOWSING IN WAR SITUATIONS

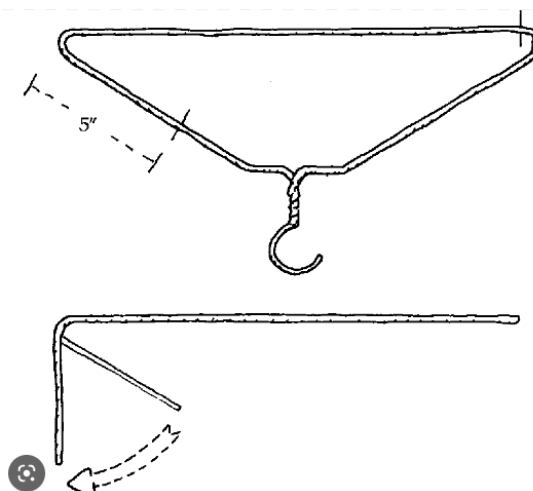

Thanks for DSV Member Bev Ellison for sourcing this material.

Article 1. Dowzers Detect Enemy Tunnels. Coat Hangers Used by US Marines to Find Mines By Hanson W, Baldwin, Special to the New York Times 1966

Camp Pendleton, Calif., Oct. 10 – Coat hanger dowzers or divining rods, are being used by marine corp engineers here (US) and in Vietnam to detect tunnels, mines and booby traps.

The traditional willow-wand dowser, employed for many centuries in the search for water, has been replaced, in combat use, by ordinary wire coat hangers or welding rods of steel, brass or other metal three-sixteens of an inch diameter.

The wires are bent into L-shapes and held loosely in both fists. As the operator walks over the ground they spread apart or point to hidden tunnels, mines or other objects.

Some marines here, including returned veterans, say they have had excellent results with the improvised detecting device.

The coat-hanger dowsers, as they are called, are not included in the marine corp equipment manuals. But, according to marine officers, they have been used in Vietnam with marked success in the last year, particularly by engineering units of the First and Third marine divisions, which are engaged in mine detection and tunnel destruction.

Supplement Other Methods

The dowsers supplement the familiar battery-powered mine detector, a complex device that emits a warning signal when passed over a buried metallic object, and the hunt-and-probe method detection with bayonets.

Major Nelson Hardacker, commanding officer of the 13th Engineering Battalion of the Fifth Marine Division, illustrates the use of the coat-hanger dowser here at Camp Pendleton to Marine replacements bound for Vietnam. The replacements are not trained in its use, but they witnessed a demonstration of the device's ability to find a concealed tunnel or a cache of arms as part of instruction along a "Vietnam trail" ... a jungle trail in dense undergrowth sown with simulated Vietcong Booby traps and laced with hidden tunnels.

Major Hardacker demonstrated the device to a group of Marine officers and enlisted men.

The two thin wires that he held were bent into a L-shapes. He held the short ends of the Ls ... about 8 inches long ... loosely in his closed fist at chest height. The long legs of the Ls each about 26 inches, extended forward from his body, horizontal to the ground and parallel to each other.

As the major walked slowly across the ground, the two wires suddenly spread apart. The ends pointed in the opposite direction shown by the wires, Major Hardacker said.

The major demonstrated the device over barbed wire and the wires again spread apart. Over a sloping tunnel, one wire pointed down in the direction of the tunnel slope, over a buried mine, the wires spread apart and pointed down.

A Marine lieutenant colonel, who did not know where the tunnels were, tried the device and got much the same results.

Article 2: Dowsing Uses During Warfare By Louis Matacia 2008

Certain prisoners in Nazi concentration camps used pendulums to determine what actions their guards would take in advance. This so perplexed the camp officers that all pendulums were confiscated. The prisoners simply made more pendulums.

In World War 11, General Patton used the dowsing skills of Captain Ralph Harris of South Boston, VA. During the North African desert campaign, Captain Harris located 14 major water wells, a much-needed survival requirement for the army. Many underground rivers were located with the first well at 700 feet, producing 2,000 gallons per minute.

Dowsing was used to improve combat skills and to save lives. In 1967, our military instruction and field work for the US Marines was classified yet the methods worked with quick results. Training was 99% accurate. The idea for survival led the Marines into realising the use and potential of dowsing.

Article 3 Thank You for Our Lives! Marines Combat Success in Dowsing 1971

Retold by Louis Matacia Written by Rebecca Hall 2008

While chatting with fellow dowsers at a West Coast Conference, a man excused himself, asking if I was Mr. Matacia. Phil introduced himself as the official Marine Corp Company Dowser in his outfit of 130 men during their combat duty of one year.

"Sir, I came here to thank you for our lives," he sincerely stated. He recounted point to point events, recounting vivaciously and lively of stories encountered and endured while in combat. "We never lost a single Marine the entire fighting in our combat duty." He spoke of the brief training on dowsing, accomplishing exposing mines without casualties, directions unfolded, exploiting traps, the mental strengthening of success that continued their courage and honour during their fighting. The crowd went silent. My eyes welled up. Many dowsers gathered and were inspired with such wonderful results from dowsing with 130 men returning safely to home. I finally spoke.

"It is you, Phil, that deserves the Medal of Honour with what you've accomplished, the devotion and belief to use dowsing for your entire company and everyone coming out alive!" Phil's audience requested more dowsing events which he greatly accommodated.

Unknown to us at that time, the Marine Corp expressed their final rejection of dowsing in 1971 in a letter written to at the direction of the Commanding General, Marine Corp Development and Educational Command, at Quantico, Virginia, which stated that several applications in the use of dowsing had been evaluated with "varying degrees of success" but that in no case was the Corps "able to determine a scientific basis for the success or failure of the techniques / instruments employed."

Reasoned the General: The 'cause' of an effect is just as important as the results produced in order to formulate doctrine, organisations and techniques in the form of military publications addressing the subject. This essential causal determination will apparently continue to remain an unknown with regard to those techniques / instructions no matter how many times they are investigated. The Marine Corps will again become interested in dowsing only when it can be conclusively demonstrated that the average Marine can employ the technique without regard to his personal convictions, confidence level, or subconscious development."

What would those 130 men say? Where would those men be if the General had taken away the dowsing tool before their tour of duty? Scientific proof isn't needed when men continue to survive knowing a simple bent wire points directions, uncovers traps, and allows their personal conviction of coming home attainable. Thank you, Phil, and your men, for all you accomplished for your company.
